The Latin Scholar

by Emma McIntyre, grade 12

Merion Mercy Academy, Teacher: Ms. Suzanne Walker

I sing of books and a girl, who first from the boundaries of Spanish class, Transferred by fate, came to Classics class—she was tossed much between French and Spanish,
By the power of her own curiosity, on account of her savage thirst for knowledge,
She, having suffered many sleepless nights debating,
until she could find her true place.
And was bringing her enthusiasm to the Classics classroom
From whence came the foundation of her education,
And her high regard for the Latin language.
Calliope, recall to me the causes, by what passion, or kind heart,
The queen of the gods compelled a girl marked by such curiosity
To undergo so many translations, to come to so many insights through an ancient language.
Can there be such a greater gift in the minds of the gods?

Pluto

by Lily Colvini, grade 8

The Shipley School, Teacher: Mrs. Anne Smith

Where do we go when he closes our eyes?
To a world where we never wake from our endless sleep.
A landscape of absence and shadows,
Home to the ones he claimed.
There are no bodies here, only restless souls.
We dream colorless dreams,
A relentless storm devoid of shape or feeling.
Once you are here, you can never leave,
forever chained to the threshold of the departed.
I will never wake from him,
This I know,
From the place where souls rest eternally,
But not in peace.
Welcome to the Kingdom of the Deceased.
